Injection molding company Rosti has secured the purchase of Bianor from the Dutch-German based private equity company, Nimbus Investments.

Bianor is an injection moulder and assembly-solutions provider within the small household appliances, electrical goods and safety accessories sectors. The firm was founded in 1997 as a Polish-Dutch joint venture in Bialystok, north east of Warsaw, Poland. It has since developed a state-of-the-art factory in Bialystok and a second facility in Ploiesti, Romania, 60km outside Bucharest, Romania.

Combined, the two facilities offer 20,000 sq meters of manufacturing capacity, plus an additional 12,000 sq meters of warehousing space.

Bianor has more than 80 injection moulding machines ranging from 50 to 1,200 ton clamping force and will be incorporated into the European division of the Rosti Group, led by executive vice president and deputy chief executive Barry Coughlan.

He said: "We are delighted with the acquisition of Bianor. This will enhance our capacity, capability, customer base and geographic positioning, giving Rosti the opportunity to support additional customers within our global footprint.

"Bianor has an excellent culture, a skilled and dedicated workforce, modern facilities and a reputation for innovation and continuous improvement.

Rosti has 10 manufacturing facilities, located in the UK, Sweden, Germany, Poland, Turkey, China and Malaysia.

Edwin Puijpe of Nimbus Investments, a hands on investor with offices in the Netherlands and Germany, said: "Together with local management, we have worked hard over the last eight years to bring Bianor to where it is today. In this period we have invested in two brand new factories. The customer base has been increased from three to more than fifteen OEM customers, all with leading positions in their sector. We are very proud of what has been achieved through the dedicated management team and workforce, which we like to thank for that. We are confident that Bianor will continue to grow and develop under the Rosti leadership."
